

Palác Koruna

Prague 1, Václavské náměstí 1

The Palác Koruna at Wenceslas Square 1 in Prague 1 is a monumental work of modern Czech architecture and a unique piece of history. This important cultural monument was built in 1914 and underwent a thorough renovation in 1996, turning it into a modern office space with a first-class standard. It is located at a prestigious address in the center of the metropolis, on the corner of Wenceslas Square and Na Příkopě. The vestibule of Můstek metro station (routes A and B) is located directly in the building, which allows for easy transportation. There are several restaurants, cafes, and shops on the ground floor of the palace, which are available to both visitors and employees. The administrative part of the building has a separate entrance through a representative reception with 24-hour security, and parking is possible in adjacent locations.
